Invitation

Join Sarah Cornally's Systemic Intelligence Lab to learn how to balance what's 'urgent' and what's 'important'

In a small group setting we'll create an action learning laboratory, to explore and experiment with system dynamics and mapping, and discover ways of gaining access to systemic intelligence. We will be learning to move with uncertainty, to let go of the illusion of "knowing", and embrace the genuine curiosity that prompts us to open ourselves to new possibilities. System Dynamics is an innovative approach used in Europe and the US to deal with complex, difficult or stuck organisational issues. The work has to be experienced to be understood. This evening Lab provides a low risk way to explore, experiment and determine its real value.

Some of the themes we will cover in the evening Lab sessions include transitions and succession, mergers & acquisitions, major change initiatives, testing innovations/new directions/solutions, strategic options, responding to crises or traumatic events, addressing repeating patterns, divesting/downsizing, high turnover, restructuring, conflict, power struggles, bottlenecks, clarifying confusion, finding a good position for a consultant, selection issues, disentangling entanglements, exploring difficult decisions, career questions, preventing burnout and creating a healthy culture.

Outcomes include gaining a new perspective, having greater clarity and seeing new choices. The session lasts 2.5 hours and we will work with issues from the group. It is possible to do this whilst maintaining commercial confidentiality. This is part of the beauty of the work. If you have an issue you would like to explore that is on the theme of the evening or another theme come along. The people who have issues on the topic will get first opportunity.

Tuesday 31 October 2017 - 6pm to 8.30pm will focus on the theme of Balancing what's 'urgent' and what's 'important'

Sessions run on a monthly basis.

I welcome you and interested colleagues to join a small group at the Stanton Library, 234 Miller Street, North Sydney. Please pass this invitation on to others in your network who you feel would enjoy learning about this leading edge approach to challenging system dynamics.

The cost to attend is $49.50 including GST and includes tea, coffee and light refreshments.
